Representation review initial proposal

1. Overall, what is your opinion of the changes outlined in the representation review initial proposal?

Do not support

Tell us why

I do not support the initial proposal because it ignores opportunities for fairer representation across the whole city and for providing for communities of interest for Puketapapa Local Board area residents in electing their ward councillor.

I am amazed that the proposal and supporting material has no reference to recent changes to legislation about the number of councillors in Auckland.

I am referring to the amendment to the Local Government (Auckland Council) Act 2009 which was passed on 31 August last year. This increased the maximum number of councillors from 20 to 29. Among the submissions by Auckland Council in August 2022 to this legislation were the following comments:-

“the council should have the same discretion as every other council to change the number of its councillors in order to provide appropriate representation of its community.”

“Auckland Council submits it should have the discretion to decide the number of councillors in order to make decisions about the number to be elected from one or two Maori wards.”

While the Council’s submission did not succeed in gaining the right to decide its number of councillors, the increase from 20 to 29 in the number available obtained from the amendment to the act did provide the council opportunities to provide appropriate representation to cater for our rapidly increasing (and diverse) population and to allow for Maori wards.

Auckland's population in 2010 when the Council was first elected was 1.44 million or 72,000 people per councillor.

New Zealand's other large regional council 2023 populations are as follows:- Canterbury 666,000, Wellington 521,000, Waikato 499,000 , Bay of Plenty 354,000 and Otago 255,000.

Despite sharing local government responsibilities with district councils, three of these councils (Canterbury, Waikato and Bay of Plenty) have chosen to have 14 councillors.

Wellington has 13 and Otago 12. If Auckland sticks to 20 councillors, it will have populations per councillor of over 80,000 in all wards except North Shore and over 92,000 in 5 wards. This compares with populations of no greater than 47,500 (in Canterbury) per councillor elsewhere in New Zealand.

Another notable comparison for representation and accessibility is with members of parliament. The Auckland Council area now includes a population equivalent to 25 parliamentary electorates. This includes all of 21 general electorates from Kaipara ki Mahurangi in the north to Takanini in the south plus nearly all of the populations of Papakura and Port Waikato in the south, where the only has settlement of any size not in Auckland Council is Pokeno. Of the Maori electorates, all of Tamaki Makaurau, plus very large chunks of the populations Te Tai Tokerau and Hauraki – Waikato are in the Auckland Council area. This results in the average number of residents per electorate M.P. being below 70,000 . Thus , unlike the rest of the country, Aucklanders are less well represented in regional decision making than in national decision making. This was clearly stated in the August 2022 submission from the council mentioned above.

Numbers of councillors relative to population is not just an issue of representation, but of accessibility. If you want to see a member of parliament you go to a fully staffed local office. As well as electorate M.Ps you can also choose to consult Auckland based list M.Ps.

Councillors are based in Albert Street and have to make special arrangements for when and where the public can approach them. As a local board member from 2013 to 2019 ,I found opportunities to engage with councillors limited even through local board business meetings. I appreciate that the big decisions that councillors are involved in are very demanding, but most residents find it hard to access them except at cultural and public events, which are not much suited to the type of consultation you can get with a local M.P. It is highly likely to be a major contributor to low voter turnouts.

The inequities for Aucklanders from the large and growing numbers of people having to be catered for by just 20 councillors are compounded by the bizarre mix of one and two member wards. Sharing a ward with another councillor does not necessarily facilitate a shared workload. People standing for election to a two member ward have a much greater cost in funds and time to reach populations of 150,000 up to 190,000. This will be a deterrent to potential candidates, especially younger people and those on lower incomes. Larger ward populations increase the likely diversity of residents and of views on Council priorities that should be catered for.

A partial solution to the deficiencies of current arrangements is to base the wards on parliamentary electorates by increasing the number of councillors to 25 and abolishing 2 member wards. The process for determining electorate boundaries is long established and ensures that the fair representation rule applies better than recent variations to wards. On present arrangements, the parliamentary representation commission's work can be used to determine the boundaries for 21 single member wards. The commission would be asked to make Papakura and Port Waikato wards have populations as close to the Auckland average as possible and determine 2 Maori wards with similar populations. This should greatly reduce the duplication and cost of current processes.

Using the five yearly parliamentary boundaries to determine council wards also has the advantage of being a little more frequent than the council review and making sure that wards are based on recent census population statistics. While the new 29 councillor limit should still be removed, it fortunately enables the number of wards to match the current number of electorates and allows for further increases in Auckland's population relative to that of New Zealand. Following the next census there is very likely to be an additional electorate inside the council boundary, probably involving Drury. The council could then have 26 or 27 wards. However this is a partial solution because it still leaves Auckland with populations of 70,00 plus per councillor. The Council should continue to push for it to be allowed, like the rest of the country, to determine its number of councillors and undertake moves to make them more representative and accessible. There may be issues over the communities of interest rules, but these already apply to parliamentary electorates as well as wards. Previous attempts to improve representation and accessibility in two member wards have been stymied by requirements to try to line up ward and local board boundaries but this was overridden by representation issues particularly for the Waitemata and Gulf ward caused by unequal population growths which will continue to apply between wards.

Local Board boundaries are much better established because local boards have suburban offices and people can better relate to them. Variations between the populations of local boards are being catered for by adjusting the numbers of board members. If the public becomes familiar with ward and electorate boundaries largely coinciding, they should find it easier to know how to contact councillors. The council could arrange for councillors to use electorate offices for consultations on regional issues, especially when M.P.s are in Wellington. Local Board offices are of course available and councillors can, as at present, decide which local boards to liaise with, but they would usually be fewer than is expected currently in two member wards.

If my proposals above are not accepted and the 20 ward model continues, I would wish to propose that the Albert Eden Puketapapa ward be split into two single member wards. As stated above, I regard two member wards as a recipe for limiting the number of people able to campaign, increasing councillor workloads and reducing public accessibility to them. At the last representation review I submitted on this and highlighted the large differences in the characteristics of the populations of much of Albert Eden from Puketapapa. These include major differences in property values, types of housing, education and ethnicities. People living in the Epsom Grammar Zones have very different needs of council services from those in the expanding Kaianga Ora subdivisions of Mt.Roskill.

The Local Government Commission's determination on my objection stated that "David Holm makes a strong case for splitting the Albert-Eden -Puketapapa ward" but decided to retain it because "The Act requires us to determine ward boundaries that, so far as is practicable, conform with local board boundaries." I doubt whether the now amended act continues with this. After all, it now allows for between 5 and 29 wards, increasing the likelihood that conformity with local board boundaries and the fair representation rule is difficult.

The fair representation rule would have required a ward based on the Puketapapa Local Board to also include some of the Albert Eden population, probably from the Owairaka subdivision. If wards are based on parliamentary electorates of course the fair representation rule is complied with. If we stick with 20 wards, one based on Puketapapa could incorporate southern portions of the Owairaka subdivision. These have strong communities of interest with the Wesley area, with both being part of major Kaianga Ora developments. Neither has much community of interest with the Maungawhau subdivision which contains large chunks of the Auckland and Epsom Grammar school zones.

I would greatly appreciate the opportunity to discuss this submission with the governing body.
